PURPOSEFUL AND MEANINGFUL CAREER

Working in Government Communications is a dynamic and exciting job — from being engaged in public consultation, to speaking with local and foreign media to keep them informed of the latest government policies and decisions.

A crucial role involves driving communications plans at Whole-of-Government level. This will enable the nation to come together during times of crisis and tackle challenges as one.

As a key player in communicating government policies and messages to citizens, your work will be critical in helping citizens understand how government policies will impact their lives, and in turn, contribute to building a better future for all.

As a Policy Maker, you will develop policies in the digital and technology domains. Your work may involve sense-making the implications of emerging technologies, or formulating digital readiness initiatives.

To strengthen Singapore's digital hub status, you may also be responsible for developing regulatory approaches for evolving technologies, and proposing plans for enterprise and talent capability development.

In essence, your role will be crucial in ensuring that Singapore remains an inclusive and connected nation. By focusing on developing policies that promote growth and development, you will contribute to building a brighter future for all. Whether it's through enhancing digital infrastructure or driving enterprise and talent capability development, your work will help ensure that Singapore stays ahead of the curve in the rapidly evolving world of technology.
