

HARVARD BLANKS AMHERST.

Sam Felton Allows Only One Hit,
That to First Man at Bat.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 3.—Harvard shut out Amherst, 5 to 0, this afternoon because of the masterful pitching of Sam Felton, the former football end rush and punter. Felton held the visitors to one single, this being made in the first inning by Kimball, Amherst's first batter to face Felton. Kimball's hit was a scratch, being nearly smothered by Capt. Wingate, who later made a play off Kimball that prevented the only other ball that looked like a hit from going through the Crimson infield. Harvard did not make an error.

Robinson, who pitched for Amherst, was hit safely nine times, and all except one of Harvard's runs were made by men who were presented with bases on balls.

In the first inning Robinson passed one man and hit another, Catcher Douglas then having a passed ball, and a sacrifice fly following. A base on balls a steal and a hit were the basis of each of Harvard's next two runs, while in the sixth a wild pitch, following three singles by Young, Felton, and Wingate, added another point to the Crimson's total. The last run, in the eighth, was made possible by Clark, who hit for three bases after Robinson had passed Wingate. Amherst got only seven men on first base, only two of these advancing as far as second. The score:
